

You Look --- Healthy

If someone tells me I look healthy, I say thank you. But really I want to smack them in the face. Where I come from, being told that you look healthy means that you have put on weight. It's not that I don't value my health—I pride myself on it. I am irritatingly virtuous for the sake of my health.

But often, I will choose to only be as healthy as my vanity allows.

This is common as it is shallow—a contest within women everywhere. Looks trump feelings all too frequently: we sacrifice varying degrees of our health for the sake of our appearance. Dieting is our most obvious demonstration of this, but then no-one is on a diet anymore, it's a lifestyle. Generally speaking, we adhere to a lifestyle that keeps us healthy, but not so healthy that people tell us we look it.

It is important that my point is not misconstrued. I am not suggesting that our lifestyle is solely dictated by our appearance issues. Eating correctly is fundamental. It can be life-changing. What I'm getting at is that while we eat primarily for our physical health and to feel good; a secondary motivation also exists: we want to look good. We are less inclined to admit that. It would mean that we were doing things for the wrong reasons. An implicit rule of the healthy lifestyle sub-

Retrospectives & Appreciatory Remarks

“I loved this movie as much as I loved the romance of watching it, of laughing and losing myself and turning around to be astonished anew by Parajanov’s visionary cinematography. I haven’t stopped smiling since.”

Ashik Kerib

by Jonathan Foltz

“As far away as is possible from the immersive, sympathetic humanism of Puiu’s earlier The Death of Mr. Lazarescu, Aurora refuses any easy access. For three hours we follow the mundane preparations for a series of murders, but with the precise motivation and the nature of the protagonist’s relationships kept consistently unclear (although it is all resolved in retrospect at the end—perhaps too much so).”

Aurora

by Ian Johnston

“The screen can barely contain the glimmers of elaborate costumes and sets. Such sparkle could be punctuated by a comic book sound effect – zing! – and Demy likely wouldn’t want to present this weird fairy tale any other way.”

Donkey Skin

by Abbey Bender

“The film is alluring, as it posits a diegetic world based pretty much entirely on orgasms, but with its uncomfortable insistence on imperialism and aggressive male-female sexual dynamics, it raises a number of questions in the modern feminist viewer: whose fantasy is this, exactly?”

Emmanuelle

by Abbey Bender

“That this loony conspiracy film about telekinesis, secret government agencies, and Kirk Douglas’s massive chest even exists is mind-boggling.”

Why Tangerine could be a turning point for transgender actors

by Andreas Stoehr

OUR EXPOSITION COLUMNS OFFER INFORMED, COMPELLING TAKES ON ISSUES AROUND THE MOVIES, FROM OPINIONS ABOUT THE TOPICS DRIVING FILMS TODAY TO RECONSIDERATIONS OF THE MOVIES OF YESTERYEAR.

“Transmisogyny does not deserve an award!” an audience member shouted, interrupting Jared Leto. Again and again she shouted, until she was heard: “Transmisogyny does not deserve an award!” This was, per The Hollywood Reporter, at a ceremony in Santa Barbara, California. It was February 2014, and Leto was sweeping through the awards circuit, receiving statuettes and ample acclaim for playing the HIV-positive Rayon in Dallas Buyers Club. “You don’t deserve an award for portraying a trans woman!” the protester added. A few weeks later, Leto won an Oscar for the same role. But that brief interruption attested to a mounting, years-old frustration with performances like Leto’s and the laurels they garner. Here’s a cis man heaped with accolades for tackling such a challenging part, while transgender women like the one he’s playing remain conspicuously absent from major film roles.

Drawing inspiration from his cultural heritage, Nelson – known for his creativity and quick-thinking menu development – executes a clever and modern Spanish menu, harnessing ingredients from the best local Australian suppliers and producers. Nelson has been a familiar face on the Sydney and Melbourne food scene for ten years - previous roles include founding chef at both Foley Lane Tapas Bar, and Mamasita.

Our menu is fresh, delicious and Spanish-inspired – fusing only the best seasonal local produce with BIG Spanish flavours. Our Vino & Fino list is 100% quality and is complemented by a cocktail list that tips its hat to fine Spanish sherry and our house barrel-aged sangria. Our Spanish breakfast until noon offers the usual suspects with hints of Spain, making Fino Par the perfect place for brunch or a cocktail beforehand.

Glut of Homes Hits 16-Year High

Tuesday, August 28th, 2007 / Financial Events / Share

“The National Association of Realtors said sales by homeowners slipped to an annual rate of 5.75 million last month, down 0.2 percent from the revised 5.76 million pace in June... Not only did sales slip but the number of homes for sale jumped 5.1 percent, the group said, meaning there is now a 9.6-month supply of homes for sale, up from 9.1-months in the June reading. It was the biggest supply of homes by that measure since October 1991.” Read the in-depth CNN report on what is now recognized to be one of the early major signs of the housing bubble.

Supreme Court Refuses To Hear Armstrong Appeal

Monday, October 29th, 2007 / Martin Armstrong's Life / Share

“Former trader and financial adviser Martin Armstrong, who is currently serving time in prison for a $1 billion fraud, will not get the chance to argue against a contempt conviction that added seven years to his sentence, after the U.S. Supreme Court refused to hear his appeal. The court denied Armstrong’s case on Monday, bringing an end to Armstrong’s fight against the contempt conviction, the sentence for which he has already served.” Read the details of the Supreme Court’s refusal in Law360’s October 29, 2007 article.

Hello! I'm Maristella González, art director and designer with a BFA from Savannah College of Art & Design and an MS from Pratt Institute. Welcome to my site; a space in which I constellate all the things I like and want to share with you. More than a fashion blog, A Constellation is about celebrating an aesthetic that may take the shape of an outfit, but could also take the form of a home, a city guide or a meal, and many things in between. Through stories told with captivating imagery and honest writing, I hope this is a place where you will find design-oriented inspiration for everyday life—including fashion, travel, food, beauty, interiors, art and architecture.

WET HOPPED BLONDE

A BELGIAN-STYLE BLONDE ALE BREWED WITH FRESHLY HARVESTED CENTENNIAL HOPS

Alcohol per volume: 7.5%

Volume: 650ml bottle, 29.3L kegs

Ingredients: Malted barley, wheat, fresh hops, sugar, spice, yeast, water

For this very special, once-a-year version of Dageraad Blonde, centennial hops grown by the Sartori family in Chilliwack were added to the brew kettle the same day they were plucked from the bine. The hops add a fresh, juicy taste of local terroir to this classic Belgian-style ale.

Wet Hopped Blonde is fermented with a Belgian yeast and bottle conditioned for natural carbonation, and an extra layer of complexity.

Pairings

Wet Hopped Blonde's citrus and spicy flavours compliment salads and desserts, while its tartness and effervescence cut through fat and refresh the palate, making it a good counterpoint to heavier dishes. Wet Hopped Blonde is also excellent paired with semi-soft ripened cheeses and is Mihail Novakov and Marin Kafedjiiski – a video production team based in Sofia. Mihail has honed his craft in street and skate photography and refined it as part of art magazine Edno's editorial and festival team. Marin feels equally comfortable filming downhill mountain bikers or following skaters and freerunners with his drone. When you combine the two of them together you get an artistic production team that gets the job done without too much fuss.

Twin Pickles
